

EVENS SUCCUMB IN WILD HOCKEY GAME AGAINST ODDS

Unique Observances and Quaint Costumes Feature Largely

The most thrilling event of the quarantine season at B. M. C. was staged last Saturday on the lower hockey field when the Even "Gentlemen" tasted defeat at the hands of the Odd "Ladies" in a hockey game of indeterminate score. The play, beginning at eleven with the opening toot of the referee's gazon, ended by sunset shortly after noon, when a New York-Washington mail aviator, with an eye for the audience, flew over the field, waving in response to the ecstatic shrieks of the assembled multitude. Well backed by an enthusiastic bleachers, both sides battled valiantly, and it was felt that the Ladies triumphed only because of longer practice in the management of their species of garment.

Led by the gigantic Coquette and Cyril (A. Thorndike '19 and M. Ballou '20), playing center forward for the first time in their lives, the offensive of both sides was absolutely intrepid. It was in the defensive, however, that the Ladies

DESPERATE CASES CARED FOR IN EMERGENCY HOSPITAL

The Lancaster Inn Emergency Hospital is now ready to take care of about fifty patients. Four trained nurses and about thirty nurses' aides sent by the Red Cross are nursing the patients under the direction of one resident doctor and the volunteer physicians from all along the main line. Most of the food, especially fresh vegetables and fruit, is donated.

The cases that need hospital attention are reported by the physicians; the Philadelphia motor messengers drive the ambulances to the homes of the patients and the doctors and interns move them to the hospital. The interns are fourth-year medical students who have been transferred from the University of Pennsylvania Medical School. The beds have been furnished by Haverford College, and linen, bedding and other supplies by the Bryn Mawr Red Cross.

In many instances there would have been no other care available for the patients. One case was that of a man in a house all alone who, without any means of securing help, was steadily growing worse when his case was reported to the hospital. Another case was that of a mother who, herself a victim, had no way of looking after her child. The children in such circumstances are put in homes and the mothers placed in the hospital.

showed their superiority. G. Hearne '19, playing goal in the garb of an erratic (and exotic) laundress, fairly filled the goal cage, thus releasing her fullbacks for their everyday duty in the forward line.

Unusual Features of the Game

Orthodoxy was scarcely the order of the day. During the second half the game was varied by the use of two balls; the second being put in play by the Gentlemen, in a desperate effort for supremacy. Swift in reprisal the Ladies added to their team two extra players to fill the positions of Dark Horse and Delegate at Large. Everybody knew, and nobody cared!

The line-up was:

FOUND—A resident Freshman who, until last week, had never heard of quarantine regulations or of Parade Night! She escaped all conversational references to these college interests owing to the fact that she was spending most of her time in the labyrinths of Wanamaker's, purchasing furniture for her room.
