

FLU OFFICE MAKES GOOD IN HANDLING SPANISH INFLUENZA

According to the report filed yesterday by Mrs. Lang, visiting nurse employed by the management of the flu office, the cases of influenza that are recorded thru the office are lighter than those earlier in the epidemic, or else the community has learned better how to handle them. She has visited 106 patients, and most of them have the cheering word "recovered" at the end of the line that tells the history of the case.

Every appeal for help that has come to the flu office has been answered, except where the family has telephoned later to say that a nurse had been secured, or that there was no longer any cause for worry. Some of the patients have been taken to the hospital, where they are improving rapidly. Only two patients whose names appear on the flu office lists for the last two weeks have died.

A copy of the report is to be turned over to City Physician Plumb for a permanent record of the work of the office.
