

CENTENNIAL STATE ITEMS.

The epidemic of influenza in Longmont is believed to be practically over. City Health Officer Stradley reports but two and three cases a day, and those in a mild form. Physicians believe that inoculation, practiced generally for the last month, has been the greatest factor in stamping out the disease. More than 2,000 have been inoculated and many are still being treated daily.