

Managers Vote to Open All Theaters Monday

The Pittsburgh Theater Managers Association held a meeting last night and formally decided by resolution to open all the theaters in the city Monday. Every theater was represented by its manager. There was absolute unanimity, and at the conclusion of the meeting a statement was given out announcing the attractions that are to appear throughout the forthcoming week.

The announcement of the attractions that will be presented follows:

Alvin Theater: San Carlos Grand Opera Company, opening Monday night with 100 people in "Aida."

Nixon Theater, opening Monday night with an attraction yet to be named.

Davis Theater, opening Monday afternoon with a nine-act Keith vaudeville show, headed by Joseph E. Howard's Song Bird Revue.

Plt Theater, opening Monday night with "Experience."

Lyceum Theater, opening Monday night with "The Man Who Came Back."

Gayety Theater, opening Monday afternoon with "The Bowery Burlesquers."

New Grand, opening Monday morning with Douglas Fairbanks in "He Comes Up Smiling."

Victoria Theater, opening Monday afternoon with "The Military Maids."

Sheridan Square Theater, opening Monday afternoon with vaudeville.

Harris Theater, opening Monday afternoon with vaudeville.

A general call was issued by the Managers Association for all the employees of the various theaters to report to their employers today to receive instructions concerning the resumption of duty.
