

Liberty Day Program.

Fifteen monster trucks decorated with the flags and other things distinctive of the allied nations will be featured in the Liberty Day celebration in this city tomorrow. Upon each truck will be representatives of the allied nations, and they will make speeches in English, and then in their native tongues, in an effort to increase subscriptions to the Fourth Liberty loan. From time to time these moving platforms will shift positions, and before the day is done they will have pretty well covered the downtown portion of the city and gone into many of the outlying districts. The plan is to have each truck distinctive of one nation and the speakers to be men and women.

This unique feature of the day should prove to be a great success, and coupled with the campaign that will be conducted that day by patriotic organizations assisted by pupils of the public schools in a house-to-house visitation ought to pile up subscriptions to bonds, and while it is a foregone conclusion that the activities will be successful yet great effort will be necessary. This will be put forth because no more enthusiastic workers for the nation have been found than the women.

With the slogan of "$20,000,000 a day," committees and teams of men workers started out yesterday. Heroic work will have to be done if Pittsburgh and Allegheny county are to subscribe to the quota set aside for them by the treasury department. We cannot afford to fail in what is expected of us. We have more than met requirements, and if we are to do so again we must extend ourselves.

Have you bought your bonds?
