

ARCHBISHOP HANNA TURNS OVER EQUIPMENT AND RESOURCES OF DIOCESE TO USE OF RED CROSS

Forty Churches, Priests, Sisters of Mercy, Charity Organizations and Money Included in Tender of Help;
Each Parish Designated as Mercy Unit

A RCHBISHOP E. J. HANNA turned over to the uses of the Red Cross yesterday the entire equipment and resources of the Catholic Church of his archdiocese to help in the fight against influenza.

This action on the part of the Archbishop will place under the control of the Red Cross an equipment which, with the nine relief stations already overwhelmed with work, it is believed will be ample to care for every case that can arise and insure as speedy a termination of the epidemic as is possible under the laws that govern such emergencies.

Mrs. J. B. Casserly, in charge of the women of the Red Cross, realizing the total inadequacy of the nine relief stations established, communicated the city's needs to the Archbishop. His reply was immediate. The equipment of the forty churches of his diocese and their charity organizations, always in active operation and ready for service, the priests of the forty churches and the Sisters of Mercy, were commandeered and told to work under Red Cross instructions until further notice. Buildings and money were included in the tender of help.

MEETS COMMITTEE

Archbishop Hanna delegated as his representative Rev. Richard Collins, who met with Mrs. J. B. Casserly, John A. Britton (chairman of the San Francisco Chapter of the Red Cross), William H. McCarthy and James Fennell yesterday afternoon to perfect the details.

Each of the forty parishes and forty churches was designated an agency of the Red Cross. Each of the priests was instructed to place his church committee on charities at the disposal of the Red Cross and to treat every needy case immediately and fully and without reference to race, sect, creed or color. Need for help was the only qualification preliminary to being given it. Thereafter one priest on the north side of San Francisco attended through his assistants to thirty-nine urgently desperate cases.
